

Cooper Hill Farm...A Family Affair

Shawn and Monika Lavergne Cooper live and work 40 acres of land that has been in the family for three generations. They offer the community fresh grown produce in a fast growing market.

"It's hard, but rewarding," Shawn said. "You see the fruits of your labor. And it's also very humbling. I can plant it, fertilize it, water it, but God grows it, ya know what I mean."

His land is part of the 120-acre plot purchased by his grandparents, Odis and Elnora Lounsberry Cooper. The property was split between Shawn's father, Lucien and Lucien's two sisters. Shawn re-introduced crops his grandparents planted and harvested.
